Howard University Retains B. E. Smith to Recruit New Dean of the College of Nursing and Allied Health Sciences

LENEXA, Kan. (Date, 2015) – B. E. Smith, the only full-service leadership solutions firm dedicated exclusively to healthcare providers, has been retained to lead a national Dean of Nursing and Allied Health Sciences search for Howard University in Washington, D.C. The top executive search firm in the healthcare industry, B. E. Smith has recently placed more than 900 healthcare executives into organizations.

Howard University is a private, research university comprised of 13 schools and colleges where students can pursue studies in more than 120 areas leading to undergraduate, graduate and professional degrees. The university has a long history, first established in 1867 by members of the First Congregational Society of Washington after the end of the Civil War. The College of Nursing and Allied Health Sciences was formulated in 1996. The Division of Nursing offers undergraduate, graduate and post-graduate programs. The Division of Allied Health Sciences includes certificate, undergraduate, graduate and doctorate programs in clinical laboratory science, dietetics and nutritional sciences, physician assistant, radiation therapy, occupational and physical therapies as well as health sciences and management.

Howard University is seeking a proven academic leader to drive educational excellence, financial performance and planning of the university’s College of Nursing and Allied Health Sciences. The new dean will lead the continued development of contemporary, interdisciplinary curricula and ensure efficient operational infrastructure. The dean will foster collaborative relationships with college faculty to drive growth. Additionally, the dean will focus on evaluating and improving effectiveness of the college education offerings.
